

A mass moves smoothly along the x -axis, moving with continuously differentiable velocity and acceleration. It starts at $x = 0$ cm with zero velocity and zero acceleration. At time $t = 2$ seconds it reaches $x = 2$ cm and again has zero velocity and zero acceleration. Show that at some time between 0 and 2 the rate of change of acceleration has magnitude of at least 6 cm/sec³.