The Department of Mathematics at Iowa State University invites applications for the positions of Lecturer or Senior Lecturer. Depending on the teaching needs of the department, the appointments could be part time or full time and include some service to the Mathematics Department. The initial appointment is for 3-5 years with the possibility of renewal. Appointment at the level of Senior Lecturer will require, in addition to the degree requirement, 6 years’ experience teaching at the collegiate level, at least 3 of which are in the teaching of mathematics or mathematics content to pre-K through 8th grade pre-service teachers.

The successful candidate will contribute to the teaching of mathematics courses for future elementary teachers, and will be an active member of our Elementary Mathematics Content Team. This team develops and refines courses to help ISU students develop a deep and profound understanding of the mathematics taught in elementary schools. In addition, team members work with faculty in the School of Education to prepare strong teacher candidates with a firm grounding in mathematics.

Qualifications:

Required:
- Master’s degree in Mathematics or Mathematics Education or related subject and at least 5 years of demonstrated teaching excellence.

Preferred:
- PhD in Mathematics or Mathematics Education
- Demonstrated understanding of current national and state-wide issues in mathematics education
- Demonstrated scholarship/service in the teaching of mathematics
- Certification to teach mathematics K-12.

All faculty members are expected to exhibit and convey good citizenship within the program, the department, college and university activities and collegial interactions and maintain the highest standards of integrity and ethical behavior.
